

Probation Quarterly Open Access and Self-Archiving Policy

September 2021

Probation Quarterly is committed to maximising access to the research and scholarly content that we publish. We therefore provide access to our articles on a fully open access basis. Authors do not have to pay a fee to publish with us, and readers do not have to register or pay to access articles.

From PQ Issue 23 (March 2022) onwards all articles are published with an open access license, specifically a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0). Essentially, this means that people are free to:

- Share – copy and redistribute the material in any medium or format
- Adapt – remix, transform, and build upon the material for any purpose, even commercially.

With the following conditions:

- Attribution – You must give appropriate credit, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made. You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use.
- No additional restrictions – You may not apply legal terms or technological measures that legally restrict others from doing anything the license permits.

More details can be found here: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>

Self-archiving policy for authors

Authors are free to distribute and archive the published version of their article on repositories and or any other suitable subject repository. However, in order to link the deposited version with PQ's website and protect the integrity and authenticity of the publication record please provide a link to the original publication, preferably using the doi that is printed in the published version of the article.